DAVID KIM

David Kim worked with the 30th LD during the presidential election, in support of Obama as well as Carol Gregory. David has now graduated college and is ready to move forward. He has been offered a position as intern for President Obama, starting in January. He is asking for monetary support. He states: "This internship gives me the opportunity to give back. I will be working for the White House Office of Correspondence responding to letters and emails on behalf of the President. Our office will help write memorandums for the President, handle gifts for the First Family, and provide our Commander-in-Chief with ten letters directly from Americans which he will incorporate into his policy decision-making process. My other major task throughout the five-month internship will be to initiate a community service project in the D.C. area. My intent is to mentor and tutor local students at an urban high school. Will you help send me to the White House so that I can continue to strive towards the goals of achieving social justice and change in the great tapestry of the American Dream? Thank you for your consideration. "

An Historic Victory

The health care bill is poised to pass the Senate this week. The bill will go to Conference Committee, and a new health care bill will emerge that can be expected to pass both houses and be signed by the President.

When that happens, it will be an historic victory for working families in America.

When Congress passes a health care bill it will be declaring that health care for Americans below the age of Medicare is now a federal responsibility. Health care will join the list of major economic issues "federalized" in the last 75 years by Congress: unemployment, retirement, and health care for seniors. Congress created unemployment insurance and Social Security in 1935 and Medicare in 1965.

The fierce battle taking place in America over this issue is actually a more critical battle over whether it is the role of government to solve problems facing our nation. This opposition is spearheaded by forces and ideas that have not accepted, and still seek to roll back, the New Deal.

For the greater part of the 20th century it was the clear understanding of both political parties that the role of government was to solve problems, and that taxes were to be collected to finance these solutions. Dwight Eisenhower and Richard Nixon were classic New Deal American political liberals in this tradition. Eisenhower had used the full power of the American government to defeat Hitler. He then directed the government to build the Interstate system and respond to Sputnik by investing in education. Nixon was the greatest environmental President of all time, responding to Rachel Carson and the first Earth Day by passing the Clean Air Act and the Clean Water Act, and creating the Environmental Protection Agency.

Kennedy thrilled America with his challenge, "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country." Lyndon Johnson was the last New Deal President, passing the Great Society, the Civil Rights Act, the Voting Rights Act, and Medicare.

It was Ronald Reagan that declared war on the role of government in America. Reagan announced that "government is the problem, not the solution." He promised that the way to improve government was to starve it of its funds. He cut the top income tax rates for his patrons from 70 to 28 percent, launching an era of 25 years in which the income for the median American family remained flat, while the income for the top 1 percent doubled and the income for the top .01 percent quadrupled.

George W. Bush picked up Ronald Reagan's torch and carried it with a vengeance. He almost repealed Social Security, the New Deal bulwark once considered untouchable by American politicians. He became the first President to cut taxes during a war, reducing the rates for his friends in the top one percent by $930 billion, while creating a $1 trillion deficit in the midst of a growing economy. Bush asked his political base, "What can your country do for you?"

To illustrate how far we have moved on the role of government, take the issue of poverty. When Michael Harrington's 1962 book "The Other America" identified destitute families and communities in America, his findings shocked the nation. In 1964, Congress, on a bipartisan vote, quickly declared "War on Poverty." In George W. Bush's America we came to accept the homeless sleeping on the street and beggars on every freeway ramp. These were simply the "have nots" in Bush's "Ownership Society."

Barack Obama has challenged the Reagan/Bush doctrine that the government should not confront the myriad problems facing America. In his Inaugural Address he said, "The question we ask today is not whether our government is too big or too small, but whether it works, whether it helps families find jobs at a decent wage, care they can afford, a retirement that is dignified." Obama has called on the government to end the recession, enact health care reform, curb global warming, and boost clean energy jobs.

The opposition to the health care bill is fierce because the stakes are so high. FOX News commentators and right wing intellectuals lie daily about basic facts about our health care system and the proposed legislation. Republicans in Congress offer no solutions, because they do not believe the federal government should play a role in fixing the health care system.

If Congress enacts health care reform, the legislation will not be perfect. But once it becomes a federal policy matter, Congress will be forced in the future to improve the system and root out the inefficiencies and inequities. As that happens, it will be an historic great victory for working families in America.

The Morality of Bankers This rich man died and showed up at the Pearly Gates. The gatekeeping angel found that this rich man had been a selfish no-good so-and-so his whole life. But the man said, "Wait a minute, I have a pattern of charitable giving." He said he'd once tossed a nickel in a beggar's cup. Plus, a poor woman he encountered needed help, and he gave her a nickel. Then there was the time that he put a nickel in the Salvation Army kettle. Hearing all this, the angel turned to St. Peter and asked, "What do we do with this man?" And St. Peter said: Give him back his 15 cents and tell him to go to hell!" That's a story that every big-shot banker needs to hear. . . . and ponder. (Thanks to the Hightower Lowdown, Dec. 2009.)

America In Solidarity is offering scholarships to qualified high school seniors and current undergraduate college students. Socialist Republicans.

The entire bloc of 39 Republican U.S. Senators locked arms in a failed attempt to block the federal health-insurance reform bill, declaring that their intention was to save the American people from the nightmare of gov't run health care. FIRST, the bill does NOT create any gov't-run health care program. It is an INSURANCE reform bill, dealing not with delivery of care but with the raw gouging consumers & taxpayers get from private insurance giants.

SECOND, have you ever heard any of these free-market purists mention that they and their families get a Rolls Royce level of socialized insurance coverage? . . . About 75% of their insurance costs are paid for by taxpayers –

The thing they most want to keep from us is a special spot of unadulterated socialism located right under the Capitol dome: the Office of the Attending Physician (OAP) – a boutique medical practice providing full service state of the art treatment exclusively to members of Congress. Full bore, British style socialized medicine - the physicians, specialists, med-techs, pharmacists, and others working there are gov't employees. No appointment required, no insurance forms to fill out, no co-pay, no waiting. Just health care.

So, let's all ask our own Congress members why we can't have what they are getting. Do they think they're better or more deserving than us? Also, if they pass a less-generous plan for us consumers, let's ask why we shouldn't take away their elite coverage and OAP, so they can enjoy the same system that they create for us.

Here's how to reach your rep and senators: <http://house.gov/>, <http://senate.gov/>, or U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510;

U.S. House, Washington D.C. 20515

Also, don't hesitate to share their responses (especially if they don't respond) with others through your email and mailing lists, blogs, letters to the editor, etc.
